But it won't be easy, and it won't be cheap, so we're relying on our team of committed grassroots supporters. Will you pitch in to help the NDRC fight in every state and every district we need to in order to end gerrymandering?

Subject: Net Neutrality is over TODAY — unless we get the House to step in [Sign Now]

The FCC's net neutrality repeal takes effect TODAY. Tell the House: Restore net neutrality!

Today, June 11th, the Federal Communication Commission's repeal of net neutrality takes effect.

Yeah — it's bad. But here's the good news: Thanks to your activism, we have a real shot to keep the internet open for activism by restoring net neutrality.

Last month, YOU got the Senate to overturn the FCC's repeal and vote to save net neutrality. Win Without War was part of a truly massive coalition flooding the Senate with millions of calls and emails from constituents like you. And together, we won an against-the-odds bipartisan victory using an unprecedented tactic called a discharge petition to bring back the open internet.

Now, we need to force the House to pass the same kind of resolution to save net neutrality. So we need to drive a huge wave of grassroots pressure just like we did in the Senate. And with net neutrality rules officially lapsing TODAY, we've got no time to lose. That's where you come in.

Tell the House of Representatives: Follow the Senate's lead and sign the discharge petition to restore net neutrality!

As of today, AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast are allowed to create fast and slow lanes on the internet to drown out our voices.

We don't know when they'll act — but we sure know it's coming. And we've got to stop it.

Our movement for peace doesn't have fistfuls of cash to pour into lobbying Congress, like the giant defense contractors do. Instead, we have people power to drive relentless grassroots pressure on Congress. And thanks to net neutrality, our people power is strong enough to go toe-to-toe with the defense lobby — and win.

Well, as of today, the net neutrality rules that keep our voices loud and clear are over. And if we don't step in, our grassroots power for peace could be throttled, too.

Don't let companies shut down anti-war activism that hurts their bottom line.

Subject: Stop ICE and Border Patrol from separating families!

Outrage is growing across the political spectrum as the Trump administration continues to separate families at the U.S.-Mexico border. Under the administration's "zero-tolerance" policy, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and Customs and Border Protection (CBP) have ripped thousands of children from their parents, and horrifying news stories have given us only a glimpse of the trauma many families are facing right now.

It's important to remember that ICE and CBP have a long history of separating families and terrorizing people fleeing poverty and violence—and it's time to put an end to the cruelty and dehumanization of immigrants by these agencies.

Take action today: Tell Congress to stop funding ICE and CBP!

This week, members of Congress are making critical decisions on appropriations for these agencies in the upcoming fiscal year. Our elected officials need to hear from us today.

Tell Congress to stop using our taxpayer dollars for ICE and CBP, and demand policies that respect the dignity and rights of all people.

If you've already contacted your elected officials, urge your family and friends to take action today by sharing this post on Facebook or Twitter.

From: Hilary O. Shelton; Director to the NAACP's Washington Bureau
Subject: We need to keep families together!

Under a new policy designed and enforced by the current administration and being led by the Department of Justice and the Department of Homeland Security, immigrant families trying to enter the United States – either illegally or through legal means, which includes presenting themselves at a designated U.S. Port of Entry and stating that they are seeking asylum – 2 are separated; with the parents going to jail and the children being sent to foster care or more often government detention facilities. This is occurring with alarming frequency; in the six weeks between mid-April and the end of May of this year, over 2,000 children were separated from their parents.

Ripping families apart is immoral and un-American. There is no law requiring the separation of children from their families simply because their parents were seeking a better life in the U.S.

For more information about this, as well as key legislation to stop the atrocities, please see the linked Action Alert.

Millions May Soon Gain the Right to Work

The U.S. Supreme Court will soon release its ruling on the viability of public sector unions. In the landmark case Janus v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), the court will determine whether forced union dues are an infringement of state and local government workers' rights to freedom of speech and association.

Proponents of "open shop" or "right-to-work" (RTW) laws are confident the court will overturn Abood v. Detroit Board of Education (DBE), a 1977 Supreme Court decision that upheld the right for public unions to collect "fair share" or "agency fees" from non-union employees. The plaintiff in Janus v. AFSCME, Mark Janus, is an Illinois state employee who argued agency fees are a violation of his First Amendment rights, especially given the inherent political nature of public sector collective bargaining.

Although it is illegal to compel union membership, non-union public workers in states without RTW must often fork over agency fees to unions. These fees are used to support union collective bargaining activities and contract enforcements. Currently, state laws mandate all union and non-union public employees are represented in the collective

...bargaining process by a democratically elected union, which becomes the exclusive bargaining representative.

Opponents of RTW laws argue workers who opt out of union membership should pay a fee, albeit one that is lower than union dues. Furthermore, RTW foes contend non-union employees receive the advantage of union-negotiated collective-bargaining agreements, such as high wages and top-tier benefits.

In a new Research & Commentary, Heartland Senior Policy Analyst Matthew Glans comments on the ramifications of a ruling in favor of Janus. "In anticipation of the upcoming ruling, many states have passed new laws, either strengthening unions or making it easier for state workers to opt out without penalties," Glans wrote.

Instead of imposing rules limiting workers' freedoms, Glans argues, "States can implement paycheck protection laws, and give workers control over their wages. States can also implement an opt-in standard for union participation, where a new worker has to choose to be in a union when they start a new job, instead of choosing to opt out. If ending the current opt-out standard is not possible, states can improve the process by requiring an opt-out only once per job or when a worker changes jobs, instead of having to wait until the end of a 12-month period."

Currently, 28 states have RTW laws, and a decision in favor of Janus should not deter the 22 other states from passing RTW laws. These laws govern all employees within the state, so both private- and public-sector workers are not obligated to pay union fees as a condition of employment. In the wake of Janus v. AFSCME, state legislators should pass "open shop" laws to secure the fundamental right to free speech and association for millions of workers and to grant workers sufficient notice and time to make an informed decision regarding union membership.

Funding Formula Committee Has Chance to Transform Public Education in Idaho

In this Research & Commentary, Policy Analyst Tim Benson examines how for the first time since 1994 Idaho's Public School Funding Formula Committee is considering dramatically altering the method the state uses to allot public school funding. To accommodate budgetary concerns and revolutionary shifts in the classroom, the committee will recommend changes that could be implemented in the 2019 legislative session. Benson argues the committee has an opportunity to fundamentally transform public education in Idaho by shifting the funding formula to a child-centric model, where funding follows students, not schools.

Energy & Environment

The Social Benefits of Fossil Fuels

This Policy Brief by Senior Fellows Joseph Bast and Peter Ferrara documents the many benefits from the historic and still ongoing use of fossil fuels. Fossil fuels are lifting billions of people out of poverty, reducing all the negative effects of poverty on human health, and vastly improving human well-being and safety by powering labor-saving and life-protecting technologies, such as air conditioning, modern medicine, and cars and trucks. Fossil fuels are also dramatically increasing the quantity of food humans produce and improving the reliability of the food supply, directly benefiting human health. Additionally, fossil fuel emissions are contributing to a "Greening of the Earth," benefiting all plants and wildlife.

Increasing Vaping Tax Would Hurt New Jerseyans Trying to Quit

In this Research & Commentary, Senior Policy Analyst Matthew Glans and State Government Relations Manager Lindsey Stroud examine a new tax on vaping products now under consideration in New Jersey. "Imposing excise taxes on vapor products are not justified from a public health perspective, and it removes a prime economic incentive for smokers to improve their health by switching to e-cigarettes," wrote Glans and Stroud.

Free To Choose Medicine in Japan: A Model for America

In this Heartland Policy Brief, Research Director Edward Hudgins examines Japan's efforts to adopt a Free To Choose Medicine model for cutting-edge tissue based cures. Hudgins also explains why Japan's success should encourage lawmakers in the United States to adopt a similar model here. "The United States is the world's leader in medical innovations, but Japan has become the innovative world leader in creating a drug-approval process that quickly makes medical breakthroughs accessible to the patients who need them the most. American policymakers need to learn from the Japanese example to ensure U.S. medical innovators do not lose their competitive edge and that the goal of these innovations is achieved: preventing and curing illnesses," wrote Hudgins.

Illinois Lawmaker Proposes Making Chicago Its Own State

In this piece published by the Illinois Policy Institute, Joe Kaiser writes about Illinois state Rep. Reggie Phillips' proposal urging "Congress to take action to declare the City of Chicago the 51st state." The possibility of Chicago becoming a state was once proposed by state Rep. Bill Mitchell, in 2011. The previous effort proved to be unsuccessful and didn't gain much support, and this new proposal looks as though it will have the same fate, as it was not voted on prior to the end of the legislative session in May. Kaiser makes the argument that "politicians would be better served focusing on reforms to make the entire state competitive, which would eliminate the contention between Chicagoans and those in the rest of the state.

In the June issue of Health Care News, Zachary Williams reports on the Trump administration's new proposals to lower prescription drug prices. The proposals feature four pillars: improved competition, better negotiation, incentives for lower list prices, and reducing out-of-pocket costs.

The Buckeye Institute: Reducing Ohio's Regulatory Burden Would Boost the Economy and Grow Jobs

*Greg Lawson Testifies Before the Ohio Senate
Transportation, Commerce, and Workforce Committee*

Columbus, OH -- The Buckeye Institute's Greg R. Lawson testified today (see full text below or download a PDF) before the Ohio Senate Transportation, Commerce, and Workforce Committee on Senate Bill 293.

In opening his testimony, Lawson recognized the importance of regulations that protect public health and safety, but pointed out that "Ohio desperately needs regulatory reform that eliminates unnecessary regulations that strangle private industry and enterprise as part of the state's broader reform efforts to boost economic growth."

Highlighting Ohio's onerous occupational licensing regime as a good place to begin reducing Ohio's regulatory burden, Lawson noted that the licensing requirements of professions such as auctioneers, travel guides, hairdressers, and flower arrangers, to name a few, do little-to-nothing to protect public health and safety, but add to Ohio's regulatory burden and Ohio's "economy and citizens suffer for it."

Lawson noted that Buckeye's research on occupational licensing and forced government energy mandates has shown the negative impact and economic trade-offs over regulation has on job creation, stating, "Ohio must also reexamine government mandates that interfere with market-pricing and make goods artificially more expensive for businesses. Such interference ultimately leads to slower job growth as businesses curtail hiring and wages in order to offset the artificially higher costs created by the mandates."

In closing, Lawson praised the Senate's efforts to "develop a meaningful process to methodically and thoughtfully reduce regulatory restrictions and burdens on all Ohioans."

Interested Party Testimony on Senate Bill 293
Before the Ohio Senate Transportation, Commerce, and Workforce Committee

Greg R. Lawson, Research Fellow
The Buckeye Institute
June 27, 2018

Chairman LaRose, Vice Chair Kunze, Ranking Member Schiavoni, and members of the Committee, thank you for the opportunity to testify today regarding the need for regulatory reform in Ohio and Senate Bill 293.

My name is Greg R. Lawson. I am the research fellow at The Buckeye Institute, an independent research and educational institution -- a think tank -- whose mission is to advance free-market public policy in the states.

The Buckeye Institute applauds the Senate for taking up regulatory reform in an effort to cut bureaucratic red tape. Ohio desperately needs regulatory reform that eliminates unnecessary regulations that strangle private industry and enterprise as part of the state's broader reform efforts to boost economic growth. If Ohio does not focus its regulations and rules on protecting the public from genuine harm, the state will continue to see slow growth and low prosperity.

Some regulations, of course, are essential for preserving public health and safety. No one wants doctors using unsterilized medical equipment, or inadequately trained engineers designing bridges, or toxic chemicals polluting our soil and waterways. Requiring appropriate education and training for physicians, healthcare providers, pilots, and truck drivers helps safeguard the general public in our hospitals and on our roads and runways. But the same cannot be said with respect to auctioneers, travel guides, and hairdressers -- all currently subject to Ohio's byzantine and overly restrictive licensing requirements.

Occupational licensing restrictions present a growing problem at both the state and national level. In 2008, nearly 30 percent of the U.S. workforce was required to hold a license in order to go to work.[1] In 1970, that number was only 10 percent.[2] But even as the scope of occupational licensure has expanded, it is unclear that such licensure has added much value to or improved the quality of goods and services. Studies have shown, for example, that stricter licensure requirements have had little effect on the quality of care provided by dentists[3] or on the quality of service offered by flower arrangers.[4] That dentists are subject to licensing requirements is not troubling or surprising, but that flower arranging should require the state's permission slip is -- which makes the lack of any noticeably improved quality all the more concerning.

And although some occupational licensing does indeed provide the public with some residual benefit, that benefit is not without cost. Expansive licensing schemes costs the community jobs.

Professor Morris Kleiner testified before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee that his research concluded that licensing laws cost between a half and one percent of jobs nationally in 2010.[5] Those seemingly small percentages amount to tens of thousands of unborn jobs across America that never came into existence -- a claim bolstered by research out of the Brookings Institute's Hamilton Project revealing that stringent licensing requirements result in fewer providers of the services subject to the requirements.[6] Fewer providers means fewer employers and fewer available jobs.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, given Professor Kleiner's findings, the Obama Administration released a detailed report in 2015 calling for nationwide reforms to occupational licensing.[7] Echoing bipartisan support for such measures, the Trump Administration's Secretary of Labor has since recognized that:

"Americans want principled, broad-based reform. If licenses are unnecessary, eliminate them. If they are needed, streamline them. And, if they are honored by one state, consider honoring them in your own state. Americans looking to enter the workforce deserve no less than our most ardent efforts to remove regulatory barriers so that they can have a job." [8]

Ohio, unfortunately, continues to contribute to the nation's licensing crisis -- and its economy and citizens suffer for it.

The Buckeye Institute's report, Forbidden to Succeed: How Licensure Laws Hold Ohioans Back, showed not only that Ohio's licensing burdens are more stringent than the national average, but also that nearly every Ohio license that requires training can be earned in less time in another state.[9] Our subsequent study, Still Forbidden to Succeed: The Negative Effects of Occupational Licensing on Ohio's Workforce, confirmed the disturbing and stubborn fact that Ohio's licensing requirements erect higher barriers to employment for those most in need of quality jobs: middle-aged and low-income workers, and those without a college degree.[10]

Our macroeconomic dynamic model, developed by economists at The Buckeye Institute's Economic Research Center, revealed that Ohio's licensing requirements have prevented more than 7,000 people between the ages of 25-45 from pursuing licensed occupations, and have discouraged people from migrating to Ohio to enter the job market. The model also showed that high licensing costs keep workers from good-paying professions, and suggests that without such costs more workers would find employment.[11]

Consider Jennifer McClellan. A new mother, a long-time professional, and a licensed massage therapist, Ms. McClellan tried moving back to Ohio to be closer to her family, but the Ohio State Medical Board denied her license application because she was 10 days shy of the state's training requirements.[12] The board unduly discounted years of training and work experience, and would not honor the license she had already earned in Minnesota.

Ms. McClellan is not alone. Ohio cosmetologists, for example, must complete 250 more hours of training than their peers in Pennsylvania and 500 more hours than hairdressers in New York.[13] Such onerous cosmetology training requirements become laughable when compared to the 150 hours of training required to be a state certified Emergency Medical Technician (EMT).[14] Requiring cosmetologists to have 10 times the training of basic EMTs, makes the case for licensing reform as clear as can be.

Beyond occupational licensing reform, Ohio must also reexamine government mandates that interfere with market-pricing and make goods artificially more expensive for businesses. Such interference ultimately leads to slower job growth as businesses curtail hiring and wages in order to offset the artificially higher costs created by the mandates. Ohio's Renewable Portfolio Standard (RPS), for example, has a very limited effect on public safety, but a tragically negative effect on job creation and employment.[15]

Advocates of Ohio's RPS requirements assured that the standard would create jobs while making the environment cleaner and healthier. Unfortunately, as The Buckeye Institute's research has shown, the RPS actually results in fewer jobs across the state.[16] Using a realistic scenario, our dynamic macroeconomic model estimated that Ohio's current RPS could mean as many as 63,000 fewer jobs in Ohio by 2022.[17] Using even more conservative assumptions, the study estimated that the RPS will cost more than 25,400 people employment by 2022.[18] Renewable energy will undoubtedly play a larger role in the state and national energy mix, but Ohio's mandates make energy prices higher today and create significant red-tape hurdles for manufacturers who are forced to spend more money to meet their energy needs and less on hiring.

Other academic research supports our concerns about the dire impact that regulations have on job creation. The Regulatory Studies Center at George Washington University, for instance, has noted that most empirical analyses find that regulation has a negative effect on entrepreneurship,[19] which should concern lawmakers because research also shows that first-year entrepreneurial start-ups have historically been net job creators even as existing businesses are net job destroyers.[20] Thus, regulations that harm entrepreneurship, harm job growth.

The Ohio Senate's more recent steps to improve the state's regulatory environment, such as Senator Uecker's Senate Bill 221 allowing the Joint Committee on Agency Rule Review to conduct more immediate reviews of rules and their effects, and Senator McColley's Senate Bill 255 reforming Ohio's occupational licensing regime, are steps in the right direction.

Senate Bill 293 builds upon those efforts by requiring state agencies to review their existing rules and identify those rules that have regulatory restrictions that include the words "shall," "must," "require," "shall not," "may not," and "prohibit." When the Mercatus Center at George Mason University studied the use of these regulatory words and corresponding restrictions across multiple states, it concluded that Ohio compares poorly.[21] Despite some methodological limitations, the Mercatus Center study offers a rough quantification of the regulatory burden that the Ohio Administrative Code imposes on Ohioans.[22] Senate Bill 293 makes good use of the Mercatus study by requiring every state agency to take a closer look at its existing restrictions and then requiring them to prepare a base inventory of those restrictions in order to begin limiting and reducing their numbers.

Canada's British Columbia adopted a similar policy creating a regulation inventory and then capping the maximum allowable regulatory restrictions.[23] Since 2001, British Columbia has reduced its regulatory restrictions by nearly 50 percent -- and without endangering public safety.[24]

A comprehensive inventory of agency restrictions will give policymakers a clearer picture of where the state's bureaucratic red tape truly lies; and a cap on regulatory restrictions will compel agencies and the General Assembly to carefully consider and prioritize any new restriction proposed. Senate Bill 293 advances the Senate's yeoman's effort to develop a meaningful process to methodically and thoughtfully reduce regulatory restrictions and burdens on all Ohioans.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I welcome any questions that the Committee might have.

Immigrants who were recently detained while working in Northwest Ohio are being represented by Advocates for Basic Legal Equality. Our nonprofit legal aid firm continues to represent immigrants and refugees throughout Ohio during these trying times. Since we do not charge for services, we depend on the generosity of the public to fund our assistance.

Would you be willing to share our message?

We need your help!

In June, more than 200 immigrants were torn from their jobs in Northwest Ohio by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agents in raids that were among the largest in the nation. They were arrested under suspicion of being in the country illegally and were sent on buses to detention centers under the threat of deportation.

Parents were separated from their children when they were detained and many remain unaware of where their children and spouses are being kept.

Legal aid attorneys in the Dayton office and throughout the service area of Advocates for Basic Legal Equality have rushed to the forefront to ensure that the workers' legal rights are upheld, that they receive due process under U.S. law, and seek reunification of the detainees' families and protection for the children left behind.

Please donate to help us continue providing free legal services to these families.

Because money in politics has become legalized corruption. And we need to put an end to it.

Money in politics has twisted our democracy out of shape and given power to deep-pocketed special interests at the expense of voters. That's why I'm running for Congress without accepting ANY special interest or PAC money.

And I'm calling on my opponent Rep. Erik Paulsen -- a five-term Republican and one of the top recipients of special interest money in Congress -- to do the same. I'm calling it The Minnesota Way pledge.

Currently, only six members of Congress refuse all special interest money for their campaigns. If elected, I'd be number seven.

My opponent voted to repeal the Affordable Care Act. He personally helped write the Republican tax scheme. He has taken $8 million from special interests to fund his campaigns -- and it's clear he pays them back with votes.

Together, we can return the power to voters and prove that we don't need special interests to win back Minnesota's 3rd District -- and the U.S. House of Representatives -- in November.

For weeks, we've been haunted by the news of the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)'s human rights abuses and the horrifying impact this has had on children, families, and the entire country. It gave me hope to see the thousands of people across the country, who marched on Saturday to stand up for immigrant rights. The American Friends Service Committee (AFSC) is against the cruel and immoral policy of family separation and we've been working tirelessly to keep loved ones together.

Make a gift today to support AFSC's immigrant rights work across the country.

You can make a real difference!

ICE has a long history of separating families and terrorizing our communities—from engaging in racial profiling to conducting warrantless searches. Since last October, at least six people have died in ICE custody. The agency has also been the subject of more than 1,200 complaints of sexual and physical abuse.

AFSC continues to speak out against ICE's human rights abuses. In June alone, we generated over 25,000 letters asking Congress to defund ICE, and collected over 8,000 signatures calling to abolish ICE. We also provided legal services to immigrants who are in detention, facing deportation, or seeking to reunite with their families.

Will you stand up for immigrant rights today, as we work to keep loved ones together and our communities safe for everyone?

Your donation will go directly toward our immigrant rights work across the country, including all the critical advocacy mentioned above, plus direct services such as know-your-rights trainings and citizenship classes. Please donate today and support our efforts to stop the human rights violations taking place within the U.S. immigration system and challenge the harsh threats of ICE and the Trump administration.

On this Fourth of July, 2018, America's 242nd birthday, we celebrate Independence Day, thanks to the people in the forefront of the American Revolution. These revolutionaries were people who were engaged in commerce and were overwhelmed with British interference and arguing "no taxation without representation." While we are living in difficult times, with much turmoil on our own soil and throughout the world, we are fortunate to live in such a great nation and have the freedom to speak freely, to fight for justice, and to expect equality for everyone, regardless of their race, religion, sexual orientation, or place of origin.

Subject: Low, even for Trump

Remember Trump's tank parade? His horrible idea for a giant military parade taking over the streets of our nation's capital is only getting worse: He's ordered the Pentagon to plan this authoritarian parade for Veterans Day.

That means that soldiers will be forced to march in Trump's parade instead of spending time resting or with loved ones. On Veterans Day.

Forcing active-duty servicemembers to spend many hours practicing to inflate Trump's ego — and then making them give up their Veterans Day holiday weekend to march in a mandatory parade? That's blatantly awful, even for Trump.

We've got to put a stop to this. On Saturday, Win Without War joined hundreds of thousands of activists marching against Trump's militaristic, racist immigration agenda. This July 4th, let's keep raising our voices to shut down Trump's violence-first policies — not prop up his authoritarian agenda with forced parades.

Tell Congress: Respect active-duty troops and cut off funding for the Trump Parade.

Every dollar that goes to this parade is a dollar that could have been invested in true safety and peace. Trump is pilfering from veterans' health care and Flint's clean water to feed his ego with an autocratic march.

Win Without War spends a lot of time and energy fighting to jam up the gears of the Washington war machine. We go toe-to-toe with war hawks and defense industry lobbyists at every turn. But for once, the D.C. consensus and the American people's common sense agree: This parade is a terrible idea.

Nobody wants this parade except Trump — not even the Pentagon. That means we have real leverage to stop this dangerous and disrespectful parade.

And right now, we have the perfect chance to act. This July 4th week, Congress is looking for ways to prove to their constituents they are standing up for democratic values.

So we need to let Congress know: The absolute least they can do this week is to prevent Trump from forcing servicemembers to march in an authoritarian parade on Veterans Day.

Tell Congress: Before the fireworks, celebrate the 4th of July by defunding Trump's tank parade.

Trump Administration Reverses Obama on Affirmative Action
By Erica L. Green, Matt Apuzzo and Katie Benner on July 3, 2018

WASHINGTON — The Trump administration will encourage the nation's school superintendents and college presidents to adopt race-blind admissions standards, abandoning an Obama administration policy that called on universities to consider race as a factor in diversifying their campuses, Trump administration officials said.

The reversal would restore the policy set during President George W. Bush's administration, when officials told schools that it "strongly encourages the use of race-neutral methods" for admitting students to college or assigning them to elementary and secondary schools.

Last November, Attorney General Jeff Sessions asked the Justice Department to re-evaluate past policies that he believed pushed the department to act beyond what the law, the Constitution and the Supreme Court had required, Devin M. O'Malley, a Justice Department spokesman said. As part of that process, the Justice Department rescinded seven policy guidances from the Education Department's civil rights division on Tuesday.

"The executive branch cannot circumvent Congress or the courts by creating guidance that goes beyond the law and — in some instances — stays on the books for decades," said Devin M. O'Malley, a spokesman for the Justice Department.

The Supreme Court has steadily narrowed the ways that schools can consider race when trying to diversify their student bodies. But it has not banned the practice.

Now, affirmative action is at a crossroads. The Trump administration is moving against any use of race as a measurement of diversity in education. And the retirement of Justice Anthony M. Kennedy at the end of this month will leave the court without its swing vote on affirmative action and allow President Trump to nominate a justice opposed to a policy that for decades has tried to integrate elite educational institutions.

A highly anticipated case is pitting Harvard against Asian-American students who say one of the nation's most prestigious institutions has systematically excluded some Asian-American applicants to maintain slots for students of other races. That case is clearly aimed at the Supreme Court.

"The whole issue of using race in education is being looked at with a new eye in light of the fact that it's not just white students being discriminated against, but Asians and others as well," said Roger Clegg, president and general counsel of the conservative Center for Equal Opportunity. "As the demographics of the country change, it becomes more and more problematic."

The Obama administration believed that students benefit from being surrounded by diverse classmates, so in 2011, the administration offered schools a potential road map to establishing affirmative action policies that could withstand legal scrutiny.

In a pair of policy guidance documents, the Education and Justice departments told elementary and secondary schools and college campuses to use "the compelling interests" established by the court to achieve diversity. They concluded that the Supreme Court "has made clear such steps can include taking account of the race of individual students in a narrowly tailored manner."

It reaffirmed its view in 2016 after a Supreme Court ruling that said that schools could consider race as one factor among many.

In that case, Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, a white woman claimed she was denied admission because of her race, in part because the university had a program that admitted significant numbers of minorities who ranked in the top 10 percent of their class.

"It remains an enduring challenge to our nation's education system to reconcile the pursuit of diversity with the constitutional promise of equal treatment and dignity," Justice Kennedy wrote for the 4-3 majority.

The Trump administration's plan would scrap the existing policies and encourage schools not to consider race at all. The new policy would not have the force of law, but it amounts to the official view of the federal government. School officials who keep their admissions policies intact would do so knowing that they could face a Justice Department investigation or lawsuit, or lose federal funding from the Education Department.

A senior Justice Department official pushed back against the idea that these decisions are not about rolling back protections for minorities. He said they are hewing the department closer to the letter of the law.

He noted that rolling back guidance is not the same thing as a change of law, so that the decision to rescind technically would not have a legal effect on how the government defends or challenges affirmative-action related issues.

The move comes at a moment when conservatives see an opportunity to dismantle affirmative action.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions has said his prosecutors will investigate and sue universities over discriminatory admissions policies. And the conservative-backed lawsuit against Harvard is being pushed by the same group, the Project on Fair Representation, that pressed Fisher.

Anurima Bhargava, who headed civil rights enforcement in schools for the Justice Department under President Barack Obama and co-authored the Obama-era guidance, said that the policy withdrawal was timed for brief filings in the Harvard litigation, due at the end of the month.

"This is a wholly political attack," Ms. Bhargava said. "And our schools are the place where our communities come together, so our schools have to continue to promote diversity and address segregation, as the U.S. Constitution demands."

"It's part of a broader conservative effort to undermine affirmative action," said Samuel Bagenstos, a University of Michigan law professor and former Justice Department civil rights lawyer. "It's something Republican administrations have been doing since Reagan."

On Friday, the Education Department began laying the groundwork for the guidance decision. It restored on its civil rights website the Bush-era guidance, which had been shuttered by the Obama administration, signaling a shift of the Education Department's stance on affirmative action, according to a person with knowledge of the decision.

A spokeswoman for the Education Department did not respond to repeated inquiries for comment.

But the policy shift comes as no surprise to civil rights advocates, who say it is only the latest measure by the Trump administration to dismantle policies aimed at protecting children and minority communities.

“There’s no reason to rethink or reconsider this, as the Supreme Court is the highest court in the land and has spoken on this issue,” said Catherine Lhamon, the former head of the department’s office for civil rights under Obama. “The Supreme Court has been unequivocal about the value of diversity and the core of achieving it, because it reflects the America. To retreat from those principles is damaging to the fabric of our country and to our students’ learning.”

Education Secretary Betsy DeVos actually has seemed hesitant to wade in on the fate of affirmative action policies that date back to a 57-year-old executive order by President John F. Kennedy, who recognized systemic and discriminatory disadvantages for women and minorities.

The Education Department did not partake in Justice Department’s formal interest in Harvard’s litigation.

“I think this has been a question before the courts and the courts have opined,” Ms. DeVos told The Associated Press. “I think the bottom line here is that we want an environment where all students have an opportunity, an equal opportunity to get a great education.”

But Ms. DeVos’s new head of civil rights may disagree.

Kenneth L. Marcus, who was confirmed last month in a party-line Senate vote, has been vocal in opposing affirmative action. Since his nomination, dozens of civil rights groups have raised alarms about Mr. Marcus’ record.

Under Mr. Marcus’ leadership as founder and president of The Louis D. Brandeis Center, a human rights organization that champions Jewish causes, the organization filed an amicus brief in 2012, the first time the Supreme Court heard the Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin. In the brief, the organization argued that “race conscious admission standards are unfair to individuals, and unhealthy for society at large.”

The organization argued that Asian-American students were particularly victimized by race “quotas,” that were once used to exclude Jewish people.

Conservative advocacy groups see the resurrection of the Bush-era guidance by the Education Department as a promising sign. Mr. Clegg of the Center for Equal Opportunity, said the Justice Department preserving the Obama-era guidance would be akin to "the F.B.I. issuing a document on how you can engage in racial profiling in a way where you won't get caught."

As the implications for affirmative action for college admissions plays out in court, it is unclear what the decision holds for elementary and secondary schools. New York City is embroiled in a debate about whether to change entrance criteria — currently a single test — into its most elite and prestigious high schools to allow for small increases in black and Latino students.

Subject: FW: 9/11 action request

There has been a very interesting drama playing out since April 10th when the Lawyers' Committee For 9/11 Inquiry submitted its petition for a Grand Jury investigation of 9/11. Here's a synopsis.

A community newspaper in lower Manhattan called Westview News hosted Mick Harrison, Julio Gomez, Dave Meiswinkle, and several of us supporters at the home and office of the publication.

The publisher, George Capsis was adamant in his acceptance of the official story, even after 3 hours of the lawyers and others making the case why demolitions occurred in WTC 1, 2, and 7.

Still being persuaded we were all conspiracy theorists, he did invite the lawyers to submit an article and he would print it.

Julio Gomez did write an article which was supposed to be published on May 1st. However, members of the staff rose up in protest against including the article, saying the paper's audience would react negatively causing the paper's reputation to suffer.

This was followed by relentless effort by George's colleague, Dusty Berke, to have him view and understand the physical evidence. Finally, he agreed to view film footage on WTC 7 to which he realized fire could not have caused the collapse, therefore, something entirely different had to have occurred.

Another meeting took place at the paper. Julio appeared again to make the case. Also, George had a few stalwarts in the community there. I believe one of them is a retired architect. His name is Barry Benepe.

Fast forward to end of May. This time, even with staff opposition, George did print the article, but along with a sort of disclaimer article about Dusty in an attempt to ameliorate the detractors.

There have been some favorable reader comments. You'll see mine there.

<http://westviewnews.org/2018/06/grand-jury-should-investigate-world-trade-center-explosions-on-911/>

Here's George's disclaimer article:

Currently, we need a lot of people to post a link to Julio's article, post comments, and especially send Letters To The Editor to gcapsis@gmail.com.

I'm told by Dusty they have to publish these online. The points that are needed are:

Gratitude for Westview News to be at the forefront in media by reporting on the petition and what it contains

Evidence of government collusion, foreknowledge, and cover up

The stated agenda for a "new Pearl Harbor"

Why the public deserves a "full spectrum" investigation which finally includes the existence of facts, testimonies, and science which qualify as admissible evidence.

Please spread the word ASAP. The hope is for Westview News to continue to publish more articles revealing the reality of 9/11 and raising consciousness of local residents and politicians as we lead up to the upcoming anniversary.

This is a direct example of how some people rooted in the "polite establishment culture" view the exposure of the real crimes of 9/11 as a threat.

They'd rather live with the lie than deal with the emotional upset of the depth of evil which perpetrated the crimes. However, we as a country must be, no we are bigger than the forces which prefer the illusion of U.S. exceptionalism.

Let's use this opportunity to elevate the discussion which we as a culture cannot continue to obfuscate. This is our way to restoring sanity as well as honor and integrity.

Subject: Progressive Congresswoman ARRESTED for opposing Trump

SIGN ON: STAND WITH PRAMILA JAYAPAL →

Progressive Caucus vice chair Congresswoman Pramila Jayapal is one of the boldest anti-Trump voices in Congress.

But she was just ARRESTED at a protest against Trump's inhumane immigration policies:

"I am PROUD to have been arrested with hundreds of others - people who believe the United States is better than holding asylum-seeking kids and parents in cages."

America needs more representatives like Congresswoman Jayapal -- representatives who aren't afraid to fight on the front lines for justice.

That's why thousands of Progressives are signing on to show their support for Congresswoman Jayapal. But we don't see your name!

If you stand with Congresswoman Pramila Jayapal, sign your name:

I STAND WITH PRAMILA JAYAPAL →

Trump's immigration policies are inhumane and criminal.

Families are being detained. Refugees are being thrown in prisons, and children are being separated from their parents.

Progressives like Pramila Jayapal understand that every day this monstrous agenda continues is an attack on human decency.

That's why we're proud to support her as she fights on the front lines for justice.

But Munsup, we need to know if we can count on activists like you to stand with Pramila when it matters most.
